HOW IS THE VIRUS SPREAD/TRANSMISSION

In order to understand the control measures which have been put in place to reduce the spread of infection, it is important to understand how the virus is spread.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) has identified that COVID-19 is not an airborne virus. Respiratory infections can be transmitted through droplets of different sizes. When the droplet particles are above a certain size, they are referred to as respiratory droplets, and when they are below a certain size, they are referred to as droplet nuclei. According to current evidence, COVID-19 is primarily transmitted between people through respiratory droplets and contact routes, including touch points.

What this means in practise, is, the droplets are of a weight that will fall to the ground at around 1 metre, thus the 2 metre social distancing rule. They can remain on surfaces for some time, depending on the type of material.

The two main methods of preventing the spread of infection are good hygiene measures and social distancing rules.
